Aaaaaand the people with the rowhouse turned down our offer. Booo. Of course, they waited until I'd gotten kind of invested in the idea of living there. Grr.

One of the amusing side effects of the house hunt is finding out that T. has an entire vocabulary I didn't know about. I heard her on the phone with our realtor saying, "If they think that was a lowball offer, they're in for a surprise... At that price in this economy, we'd be upside down on the mortgage in three years."

My wife speaks Realtor. Turns out her grandmother was widowed in her fifties, studied up, took the exam, and sold real estate for twenty years. It's sort of a family heirloom.

Thank you

...And there goes the weekend

But hey, we got a day and a half of this one! And I got to sleep in for two whole mornings. Too bad

Isn't it interesting to find hidden talents in one's spouse after the wedding? Bonus!

It sounds like T. has some sort of make-them-sweat plan. Or something. I don't have the nerves for this sort of thing--I'll stick to law enforcement. g

Aw bummer. Well, that just means it wasn't The One. (or something)

This isn't the rowhouse with no row is it? The Limbless Tree? 'Cos I was just kidding about that. Too much vertical -- you'd never make it up to bed after Thanksgiving dinner.

As an aside, how awesome is it to be able to say "My wife..."? ;-)

Heee--I typed it and looked at it for about ten seconds, being all smug and annoying, before I finished the sentence.

Ugh. But if the market there is anything like it is here, you should have plenty of other opportunities.
